We are one, but we are many

Cultural Celebrations and Student Diversity

At Holy Family, we are an inclusive, multi-cultural community that celebrates diversity; we recognise people of all backgrounds and share in their important dates throughout the year. Next week we acknowledge NAIDOC week (beginning the 8th of November), which is an Australian celebration standing for National Aborigines and Islanders Day Observance Committee. The following week marks the start of Diwali, (Saturday November 14th) the Indian Festival of Lights, lasting for 5 days. In this issue you will find an array of pieces that broadly showcase the diversity of our students and their special interests.

A Poem about my day by mia

Firstly, I wake up on a lovely day and I will be willing to play. I jump out of bed while cuddling my ted.

My DAY

I walk to the <sup>breaky</sup> dining table with my dog called Racheal. After breakfast, I get ready for school. I brush my hair with care. I put my uniform on and get ready to perform. (Tonight I have to sing) I'll be confident for at least a long moment. I pack all my stuff for school and try to be cool. I got to school while <sup>is</sup> mum driving, while <sup>the</sup> sun was rising. I got to school and <sup>was</sup> loving the view. I said "hi" to my friend, Our friendship never ends. The day went on, as I played with my friend John. 3pm school finished, as I <sup>get</sup> dismissed. I walked outside of the school waiting for my Mum to pick me up. When mum picked me up I ~~felt~~ felt pretty nervous because I was about to perform singing.

- on stage singing at school. Once I got home I quickly got dressed to perform. ~~Once I got home~~ I ~~quickly~~ <sup>*quickly</sup> to put on my ~~sparkly~~ <sup>rushed</sup> sparkly tutu, a cute hair bun, a shiny tiara and shiny red shoes. Mum drove me back to school and I headed to <sup>the</sup> stage. I was pretty confident. I started singing "~~the~~" "What a lovely day, I can go and play. I can go and relax... until" BANG went the microphone as it slipped ~~out~~ out of my hand. I ran ~~out~~ <sup>off</sup> of <sup>the</sup> stage while the audience was silent for a few moments. I sat down thinking about what I should do. Then a word in my head popped out saying "Don't give up!" I got up, grabbed the microphone and continued singing "What a lovely day, I can go and play, I can go and relax I can go eat some snacks." After sang the audience applauded. This is why you

How the Birds got their colours....

Brief storyline:

the dove got hurt one day while trying to land on good ground, instead he landed a sharp stump and wounded his foot badly.

He lay there for a long time till all the other birds found him and gathered round to try to help the poor little dove. All except the crow who stayed behind and wandered around all alone.

As they were all thinking of what to do, the parrot came forward and burst the big swollen boil.

Different colours aka. Blood, burst out of the dove's foot and ate up the black colour on every single bird who'd come to try to help.

Some of the birds got red some got blue, some green and some orange some got patterns and stripes and spots, Except for the crow who is still black to this day.

thoughts:

I think that this story also kind of has a moral of always trying to help others.

Snakes and Ladders

Sam and Ethan T

Name of game: Tridents and Sacraments

About this game: The game that inspired this idea was Snakes and Ladders. Basically, we're going to change the snakes into red tridents because Satan is rumoured to have a red trident. Also, the ladders that help you are going to be changed to the Sacraments. You will have to answer a question to go up and "ascend" to a higher position in the map. If you land on the tridents, you have to go down to where the three points point too. Your starting position is the same, but it's going to say Hell, and the top is going to say Heaven. Also, there is going to be a sign on the 99th square saying, "God's anger has repelled you. You have been sent to Hell. Miss your next turn" It's basically a twist and an unfortunate fate for the person who lands on it.

Rules:

You both start at the bottom, or "Hell"

Roll the dice once each. The person who rolls the highest number out of the two/three/four gets to go first.

You can only roll once each turn.

Whoever gets to Heaven first wins.

If you land on a trident, you must go down to where the tridents three points are.

When you land on "Ascend" you go up to the square is says.

NEVER WONDERED WHY

“Where did you put it?” Kenzie asked. “In the bathroom?” Aria confusingly replied. It was a regular day at the Johnson’s house. Everyone argued, laughed, cried and so on. You see, Aria’s parents separated when she was only 8. Now that she is 14, everything felt normal again. Her dad left the house so that meant she was living with her mum, sister and brother. She never wondered why they separated cause she was too bothered to ask. “Im heading out, goodbye”, Aria’s mum exclaimed as she closed the door. Kenzie stomped up to Aria who was sitting on the couch. “What do you want”, Aria groaned. “What do think I want?” Kenzie huffed. “Your scrunchies?” Aria replied. “Exactly. So hand it over”, Kenzie gazed. “Don’t have it”, Aria groaned again. Since Kenzie was only 7, everything that was hers needed to be protected. “GIVE IT”, Kenzie screamed. “OUCH! You almost made me deaf!” Aria shouted. She stormed up to her room and plopped onto her bed making her phone almost crack. Her black hair covered her angry face. She could hear Kenzie slamming her door over and over again. Aria decided to just put on her headphones and listen to some quiet music. Quietly, she fell asleep. The next day, a light smell of caramelised bacon filled the air. She walked to the kitchen and saw her brother standing in front of the stove making breakfast. “Good morning”, Alex chuckled. “Is mum home?” Aria asked while yawning. “Yeah. She just slept like 40 minutes ago”, Alex sighed. “But, let’s enjoy some breakfast”. Aria pulled a chair out and sat down while Alex placed down the plates of the hot, steaming breakfast. Bacon to waffles, everything on the table was mouth watering. “Oh my goodness. This is so good”, Aria exclaimed while taking a bite of bacon. Kenzie walked down the stairs slowly while rubbing her eyes. She yawned and ran to the table. “Good morning”, she squealed. “Take a seat and eat breakfast”, Alex ushered. Aria decided it would be best to not bother Kenzie today. She thought that bothering her would make things worse. With a last bite of bacon, Aria hopped out of her seat and placed the plate in the sink, walking to the bathroom. She groaned while grabbing the toothpaste and toothbrush. Laziness was all over her mind. Brush brush brush went the toothbrush as it cleaned Aria’s teeth. “Can you please find my scrunchies”, Kenzie pleaded. “After I brushed my teeth”, Aria grinned. “Thanks”, Kenzie exclaimed while heading out the bathroom. After a minute or so, Aria began to search for Kenzie’s scrunchies. She checked behind the couch, between the couch, inside the closets, wardrobes, bathrooms, bedrooms and the toilet. No where to be seen. “Aria”, Kenzie said. “Yeah?” Aria replied. “I found my scrunchies. They were up my sleeve the whole time”, Kenzie laughed sarcastically. Kenzie pulled up her sleeve and showed Aria the scrunchies that we stuck on her arm the whole time. She pulled down her scrunchies which left a red marking around her arm. Aria gave a big sigh and started chasing Kenzie around the house. The noise caused their mother to wake up. “Whats happening?” Their mum groaned while walking out of the room. “Hey mum!” They all exclaimed. “Breakfast leftovers are on the table”, Alex smiled. Now that is the life in the Johnson house. It probably repeats over and over again. If you’re wondering how the dad is doing, here is a short story. The dad has become a billionaire except he wouldn’t use his money. He is a cheapskate, saving his money and finding cheap ways to do things. If Aria and her siblings were to stay over at his house for a day, they would probably have to use water that has already been used a bunch of times to take a bath. Now that’s all for this story. Hope you enjoyed. Bye.

Tell a tale

Haunted House

The dark infested woods were indulged in silence. I watched the house from a distance gazing from top to bottom. The bronze coloured bricks covered in overgrown moss marked the walls of the building. The shattered windows embraced the house. A destroyed fence surrounded the gloomy house and widowed plants covered the grounds of the land surrounding the fence, inside and outside. A shiver laced my spine as an intelligible whimper echoed the forest behind me. Dismissing the sinister looking house. I followed my dog along the rocky dirt path. with only the moonlight as a source of light. I followed my suddenly very quiet dog quirking an eyebrow. Jasper howled at the moon and made an abrupt stop. I looked around cowering in the pitch-black forest of trees that surrounded us. "Boy what have you gotten us into?" I scolded in a muffled voice. Slowing down to catch my breath, I placed my palms on my knees and exhaled a sharp breath. Looking down I blinked back my tears of exhaustion and looked up again. Looking up, I soon found myself becoming cold noticing that my dog Jasper had just left. Sighing I rolled my eyes, "Lucky dog." I mumbled over and over again following a path I found.

Hiking up the path that had suddenly become upward, I felt something brush against my leg. I FROZE. Suddenly fighting the urge to run, I bit down on my lip and impaled the skin. Squeezing my eyes together as powerfully as I can, I lifted my leg up to run when... I found that I am currently indeed, PARALYSED! A singular tear escaped my eye and trickled down my cheek, slowly receding onto the cold soil floor. The taste of blood entered my mouth as I bit down harder. With my eyes still closed, my fingers stretched out and twitched involuntarily. My heart started to palpitate and I felt my leg, foot and toes go numb. A sudden rush of adrenalin swallowed me and I ran feeling movement in my feet once again. My knees buckled and my eyes shot open as I heard a quiet voice whisper, "Follow your heart's attraction?" furrowing my eyebrows, I immediately scanned my eyes around whipping my head back and forth. Nothing.

Absent-mindedly, I soon found myself back at the footpath, staring directly down at the sinister house. Taking a minor step closer to the house, down the steep hill, I could feel the cold air around me soon become warmer. Taking a little bit of a larger step closer my nose was filled with the most delectable aroma ever! At a quick pace, I walked down the rockily steep mountain that had me suspended away from the house. Stepping closer I felt more alive, more attracted, it was as if the house itself was pulling me towards it. As I was mere metres away the house that was covered in bronze and overgrown bricks, broken and rusty fence, shattered glass windows, destroyed shingles on top of the roof. I soon experienced an outer body experience...

A bright light clouded my eyes as I squeezed them shut to stop the shock that overwhelmed me. I opened my eyes to a new magnificent sight! This new house was modern and was kept in beautiful condition. The house was massive and the garden looked so alive! The once shattered windows were now replaced with French styled stained glass. The old destroyed and broken shingles were now ebony black and in perfect condition. I squinted and looked around at the difference. A new aroma filled my nostrils, I felt like I was flying. The light sun clouded my eyes as I scurried towards the large black doors. I reached out to pull the black handle that was attached to the large dark oak door. As I pulled out, another force pushed in and I fell right onto my back. "Your majesty, are you alright?" WHAT!?

Tell a tale Haunted House

October 31st, Halloween. Dressed up in an angel costume with my best friend, Michelle. We were out trick-or-treating one day when we saw a crowd surrounding a house. We looked at each other in confusion and started heading towards the house. The house was decorated with planks, nailed into place and looked very rickety. Two stories with windows that didn't have glass in them and all you could see was darkness, but eyes peered curiously out. "What do you think this is?" I whispered beside me, one hand fiddling with the hem of my white skirt.

"It says it's a..." Michelle slightly leaned forwards, keeping her arms linked with me, "Haunted House." I smiled with excitement as I tugged on her arm. "Well, let's go then!" As we waited in the line, we glanced at the people walking out of the Haunted House, pale faced with cold sweat running down their entire body. I snickered and said, "It must be really scary, eh?" Michelle nodded and led us to the beginning. As soon as we got into that house, a horrid smell took over all of our senses. I plugged my nose shut and tried to keep my eyes shut since it stung. We heard a scream echo across the whole house. Pictures of monsters were plastered on the wood plank walls, I could even see some mould growing on the wood. Dang, they put so much effort into this, and not charging people to come in? They must be rich! "Rawr!!" We flinched as we heard the loud growl coming from a cage. We opened our eyes open as we saw a beast looking creature in a cage, squatting down and furrowing their eyebrows. They even hired actors?! Being reassured by the thought of them being humans, I smiled and waved. The monster continued to growl and bang on his hairy chest. We walked leisurely, the light flickering from time to time. My heart froze as I saw a clown at the end of the hallway, smiling a big smile at us. Oh heck no, clowns are my biggest fear. "M-michelle..." I looked at her, unsure if I wanted to continue. "Let's just go," she pulled me with her, heading towards the clown.

"Hello, nice to meet you." Michelle smiled at the clown while I looked away. "See, not so hard." She playfully shoved me and continued turning corners. But then, we heard a chainsaw running behind us. "What the-" we screamed in horror as we saw the clown chasing us with a chainsaw. I almost laughed at how funny the clown was running, but my fear engulfed me. We turned a harsh corner, where the old and decaying stairs were. Being powered by panic and terror, I leapt up the stairs, dragging Michelle with me. If I was dying with anyone I would rather be it Michelle than the clown. Michelle looked behind, slowing us down. "It's gone." I heaved out a relieved sigh. I placed a hand on my heart in an attempt to slow it down. I inspected our all white outfits, well, now they were stained with brown dirt spots. We expected light, since we saw windows when we were outside the house, but it was still dark. Very dark. No flickering lights. I looked around, what was this? Just a dark room? I stood in place as I saw the eyes, peering as curiously as we saw outside. "Michelle, look." She nodded, but not looking at the eyes that I saw. I looked where she was looking. Another pair of eyes. As we walked down, more eyes started to appear. They all looked scared and helpless. We walked in a dead end, was this it...? Whispered flooded our ears, all unintelligible. The whispers stopped as me and Michelle saw a couple of friends walk down the same hallway we walked in, all looking at the eyes. "Help!" I tried to scream. But it came out as incomprehensible. Those were what the whispers were... people were calling out for us, to help them. Now we're one of those people. Then that's when I realised I saw a wire coming out of the 'people' that were walking out of the house.

It was a dark day, 31st of October, Halloween. Me and my friend saw a haunted house so we skipped over there. There seemed to be a line up, so we joined it. My eyes glued to two girls, in angel costumes, pale faced and covered in cold sweat walking out of the house. "It must be really scary, eh?"

Spooky skeleton's (for Halloween) By Djaran 5/6ND

It was a dark eerie night with nothing in sight. A scary group of fog was blocking the moon light. A skinny white figure was dancing in the night, he shimmied to the left, he shimmied to the right, he shimmied so much that it would give you a fright. You see this man was quite a fellow because his joints moved like jello. I don't know why you won't say hi because this man isn't really that shy. He pranced over adding a jump it didn't help that it was next to a garbage dump. He swayed to the front he swayed to the back, he had talent that's for sure but it was pretty whack. But then he stopped and turned straight back. He ran through the grave yard with ghastly ghouls then through a forest with rusty old tools. He was pretty quick, fast and slick it must be because he was thin as a stick. He was still running I don't know how but then he stopped because he probably thought he would not get caught now. And then it seemed like he was getting ready to sway but he jumbled to pieces and scurried away. He was followed to a grave yard but then saw something quite bazar. It was his friends dancing in a straight line, being honest it was quite fine. But then the chaser finally had a realization, they were not weird and creepy, they were just skeletons bony and sneaky. They stopped dancing as the sun started to rise and ran away to find somewhere to hide. The skeleton group where allergic to the sun that's why only at night they have fun.

Movies are more enjoyable than books

Opening statement

This persuasive test is to state that movies are more enjoyable than books. The arguments are mostly going to state that movies are better than books.

Argument 1

Movies are better than books because I think there are people who like fast paced action and inside movies you get to see what they say but you get to see their character how it is instead of having to imagine it. You can see how they are doing what they're doing inside movies and still get you see what they're speaking just a little less clear.

Argument 2

Since movies are quite a bit more face paced than books, I find it more fun to watch because sometimes movies will have skipped the little filler parts inside of the book. That doesn't need to be there but sometimes people will like having the filler parts inside the book because the filler parts of the book can also grant a bit of information for. Later parts of the story. But I don't like being spoiled on the movie either. In books sometimes you can see if they're getting hurt on, they are exhausted inside the movie in books you can only read and imagine the exhaustion of them getting hurt of them being exhausted and not being able to work anymore.

Argument 3

Books are also quite a pain to read through for me until like 30 minutes of reading. But at 30 minutes of reading my time to read is already gone and I have nothing to read about anymore. Because I normally only read at school because at home, I don't really enjoy any of these and I play games. I also like things being faster paced because when its fast paced I can enjoy the movie fast and quick. So, I can move on the play games with my friends and also have fun and If my friend has watched the movie to and I can talk about it with them so we can discuss things with them too and it takes it more enjoyable.

I haven't normally seen movies that skip filler parts but I've heard a lot of people complain about it and talk about it on some anime movies threads and normal ones too from the comics. Some evidences I have of this is that arrow also is doing this for his persuasive writing and I asked Devon as soon as you said you need to find evidence.

Why cars are better than bikes

Bikes in my opinion is pretty much as dangerous as cars, so I'll be explaining why cars are way better than bikes and how cars can be safer than bikes. Blah blah blah and other stuff.

Argument 1

Cars are better than bikes because cars can be more comfortable and bikes can be very tiring to ride. Basically, bikes don't use gas, they use power of a human. But cars can be convenient and drive by itself. Well, bikes can save the world but it's boring to use and its way more different than cars you might know like Lamborghini and bla, bla, bla terrible ugly supercars and whatever. Cars have now evolved and have some cool touch screen in the car, sometimes it can drive by itself like a Tesla, sometimes electric cars are pretty useful and there's no charging station anywhere here.

Argument 2

Cars are also better than bikes just because of one thing, CARS ARE WAY MUCH FUN THAN BIKES! People can be better off driving a car more than riding a bike. Cars can somehow feel fast even though you're slow. But bikes don't really feel fast and sometimes it's somehow | easier to drive a car. Mostly bikes are slow as cars are fast and can go 300km/h. Okay go to argument 3. In the internet's opinion they say that cars are more protected than bikes, roof over head and protective airbags that save you from dying. There were SO much fatalities by riding bikes during the years, mostly because people not caring about bikers and running over them or more.

Argument 3

Cars are way safer than bikes because bikes can be stolen and you can fall of your bike and get hit by a car, and mostly bikes aren't safe from wild animals because imagine a lion chasing you and you are tired, the lion might destroy your bike and you have to run for you life. People can be really tired of bikes and can have trouble learning how to even ride a bike and people would rather wait for like years to actually drive a car and have fun with it. Also, in my internet research it says that when you ride a bike it's twice as dangerous than driving a car, this can lead to a really fatal death and 500 times riskier in road.
